Revelations, Chapter VI.—1. And I saw when the Lamb opened one of the Seals; and I heard, as it were the noise of thunder, one of the four Beasts saying, Come and see.

2. And I saw, and behold a White Horse; and he that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given unto him; and he went forth conquering, and to conquer.

3 And when he had opened the second seal, I heard the second Beast say, Come and see.

4. And there went out another horse that was Red; and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another; and there was given unto him a great sword.

5. And when he had opened the third Seal, I heard the third Beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo, a Black Horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand.

6. And I heard a voice in the midst of the four Beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine.

7. And when he had opened the fourth Seal, I heard the voice of the fourth Beast say, Come and see.

8. And I looked, and behold a Pale Horse; and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him: And power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.

9. And when he had opened the fifth Seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held:

10. And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11. And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.

Description of the Picture.—Death on the Pale Horse (Rev. ch. vi. ver. 8) is represented destroying Man and all living things, in every direction. The Powers of Hell follow on the clouds behind him. An image of the devouring mortality is seen in the sudden death of a young mother and her infant son. She is supported by her husband, who at the same time extends his arms, as it were, to stop the galloping of the Pale Horse. Her daughter, a beautiful child, in a pathetic attitude, endeavors to succor her. The destruction by wild beasts is represented by a lion and lioness rushing upon a tumultuous group of men on horseback and on foot, who are endeavoring, in turn, to destroy their assailants. A wild bull is seen attacking the crowd behind, and tossing a youth in the air. The furious animal is himself assailed by the dogs. In the clouds an eagle and heron are engaged in mortal combat, and on the foreground a dove lamenting over its dead mate. Near the bull, but somewhat further in the picture, a young man is struck dead by lightning, on the supposed day of his intended marriage; his brother is supporting his lifeless body, and a young female, his intended bride, gazing wildly on him. A number of figures are seen in confusion, terror, and astonishment at this awful visitation. Over their heads the firmament is rent; the clouds are broken; the thunders and lightnings let loose, and the heavens rolled together "as a scroll." (Rev. vi. 14.) The destruction by Famine is represented by a sallow, emaciated man, with a wrinkled visage and hollow eyes, on his knees, endeavoring to dig up some wild roots with his long nails, to appease the ravenous cravings of nature. His empty cup lies beside him. Close to this, the destruction by Pestilence is figured by a woman with an expression of pain and malady in her wan countenance and crouching attitude. The destruction by War is represented by a figure in helmet and armor, mounted on a red horse, with his sword raised in the act of charging, and the clouds of battle rising before him. Near this scourge of the human race, a man mounted on a black horse with the balances is seen. (Rev. ch. vi. ver. 5.) Christ, crowned, with a bow in one hand and a quiver at his shoulder, mounted on a white horse, is going forth "conquering and to conquer." (Rev. ch. vi. ver. 2.) On the foreground beneath, the serpent lies with his head bruised, in fulfilment of the sacred word. The eyes of the Redeemer are fixed upon the souls of the martyrs, who are ascending in glory to heaven. (Rev.

ch. vi. ver. 9.) This mysterious representation, which forms so beautiful a part of the picture, is introduced here as another emblem of the final accomplishment of the Christian dispensation at the last day. In the background, on this side of the picture, a Roman army appears on its march, loaded with the golden spoils of the Temple of Jerusalem, and driving along the Hebrew captives. On the still more remote sea-coast, a Christian fleet is seen, and the landing of the Crusaders to recapture the Holy City.

This picture represents the combatants engaged in the struggle for the independence of the Netherlands when that country was under the dominion of Spain, in the 16th century. PIERRE DATHEEN was a Protestant minister, who had labored zealously to establish the Republic. Brave, impetuous and indefatigable, he preached in the churches, in private houses, in the open air, and amid the field of battle. In the above scene, DATHEEN is represented as being mounted on the carriage of a cannon, and inciting his companions to avenge one of their brethren-in-arms—the leader of one of the powerful corporations which had struggled so courageously against the tyranny of Philip II. The warriors are swearing to avenge their chief, at the moment the struggle, to the left, is commencing.

SCULPTURE IN MARBLE.

164	Statue of Penelope. Presented by J. Rhea Barton. Esq., ...	Rinaldo Rinaldi.
	Penelope, inspired by Minerva, having penetrated the disguise of Ulysses, as he sits among the suitors, determines to offer a trial of strength, in which she is sure of his triumph. She brings forth the bow and arrows of Ulysses, which she had carefully preserved during his absence, and bearing them majestically to the hall where the suitors are assembled, pauses at the threshold and announces her plan.
	"Who first Ulysses' wondrous bow shall bend, And through twelve ringlets the fleet arrow send, Him will I follow, and forsake my home, For him forsake this loved, this wealthy dome."
165	Hero and Leander, ...	Carl Steinhauser.

Hero was a priestess of Venus, at Sestos, on the coast of Thrace.

The loves of Hero and Leander are related in a poem attributed to a Grecian bard who bears the name of Musæus. Hero and Leander saw each other at a festival in honor of Venus and Adonis, at Sestos, where he, among many of the people of Abydos, was present, and where they immediately became enamored of each other. Favored by the darkness of the approaching night, Leander stole into the temple, and confessed his love to the blushing maid. But the relations of Hero, and her sacred office, opposed the union of the lovers. No difficulties, however, could discourage Leander. He swam every night across the Hellespont to his mistress, guided by a torch which shone across the strait from the tower of Hero. Even the stormy season of winter could not deter the adventurous lover from his perilous visits; till at last, on one fatal occasion, his strength failed him, and the waves carried his lifeless body to the foot of the tower, where Hero anxiously awaited his accustomed arrival. Overcome with anguish at the sight, the love-distracted girl threw herself from its turret on the corpse of her lover, and perished there.

This work was so much esteemed by the ancients that many antique repetitions of it have already been found. The best is that known as the Borghese, which was discovered near the hot baths of Dioeletian, early in the seventeenth century. The mattress is modern, and was executed by Bertin in his early youth.

206	The East Gate of the Baptistery of St. John, at Florence (a Cast from the original bronze) . .	Lorenzo Ghiberti.

It exhibits two parts, divided into ten panels, containing bas-reliefs, the subjects of which are taken from the Old Testament. Varchi calls this gate a marvellous work, and perhaps unique in all the world. D'Agincourt considers it one of the most precious monuments of modern art. Michael Angelo judged it worthy to be "the Gate of Paradise."

1. This first bas-relief represents the creation of Adam and Eve;—also, when they ate the forbidden fruit; and when the angel drove them from Paradise.

2. Represents Adam and Eve with their children still young. Cain offers his first-fruits, and Abel sacrifices the best and the fattest of his flock. Cain tills the ground. In the distance Abel takes care of his flock. Cain, under the influence of envy, kills his brother. God appears to Cain, and asks him what he has done with his brother Abel.

3. Noah is coming out of the Ark: himself, his wife and children, and everything that was there. He offers a sacrifice. The rainbow appears as an eternal covenant between God and him. Noah is seen planting a vineyard, and, having taken of the juice of its fruit, he becomes drunken. In this condition he is scoffed at by Ham, but his two other sons cover him with a mantle.

4. Three angels appear to Abraham in the vale of Mamre. He is about to sacrifice his son Isaac. His servants go with him to the foot of the mountain, where he has commanded them to remain. An angel arrests the hand of Abraham, and shows him a ram for an offering in the place of his son.

5. Birth of Jacob and Esau. While Esau is at the chase, Jacob, assisted by Rebecca, his mother, receives the blessing of Isaac, by covering his hands and neck with the skin of a goat, in order that his father, who could not see, might believe, from his hairy hands, that it was Esau his brother.

6. Incidents in the life of Joseph. He is put into a well by his brethren; then, sold to Potiphar, he explains the dreams of Pharaoh; he foretells the dreadful famine which threatens Egypt, and provides for it abundantly. Pharaoh admires his wisdom, and crowns him with honors. Jacob sends his sons to Egypt to buy corn; Joseph recognizes his brethren, and gives them a great feast. Has the golden cup hid in the sack of Benjamin, and, after it has been found, Joseph makes himself known to his brethren.

7. Represents Moses on the top of Mount Sinai, receiving from God the tables of law. Lower down, and separately, Joshua is seen prostrate, and, at the foot of the mountain, the terrified Israelites awaiting the return of their Lawgiver.

8. While the Ark carried by the Levites is stopped in the middle of the Jordan, Joshua passes over, followed by the Israelites. Twelve men, chosen from the twelve tribes, take from the river each a stone to form the monument commemorative of this miraculous passage. Farther on are seen the twelve tents erected by the order of Joshua, and in the background the Holy Ark carried around the walls of Jericho, which the Jews took in seven days, the walls having been thrown down by the sound of trumpets only.

9. David, the Conqueror of Goliah, defeats the Philistines, and returns in triumph, carrying the head of the giant in his hand. The people of God meet him singing, "Saul has killed his thousands, and David his tens of thousands."

10. Represents the Queen of Sheba, with her vast retinue, visiting Solomon, and offering him rich presents.

The fields or frames which surround the panels, exhibit little niches, with twenty small upright figures, representing sibyls and prophets; four figures recumbent, and twenty-four heads, among which is the portrait of the artist, Lorenzo Ghiberti, and that of his father and master Bartoluccio, who assisted him in the work. Near these busts is this inscription:—

Laurentii Cionis de Ghibertis opus, mira arte fabricatum.

The frame, also of bronze, is enriched with festoons of fruits and flowers, with birds and beasts.

230	Battle of the Centaurs and Lapithæ. Original model (in the centre of Rotunda). Presented by the Artist,	John Lough.

At the marriage of Pirithous, one of the Lapithæ, with Hippodamia, the chiefs of the Lapithæ were assembled to celebrate the nuptials. The Centaurs were also invited to the festivity. One of them, Eurytius, inflamed by wine, resolved to make the bride his prize, and, in his fury, seized her by the hair to carry her off. His companions followed his example, and each, according to his fancy, fastened upon one of the female attendants of the bride. The Lapithæ instantly resented this brutal outrage, and the fight became general. Many of the Centaurs were slain, and the rest compelled to retreat.

This group, the work of Mr. Lough, a British artist, is truly original, both in conception and execution. Though so many large figures, men and horses, are brought together, the whole is combined with an admirable harmony of design. The attitudes of the male figures exhibit strength and grace, and the females the beauty, delicacy, and alarm of their sex. Near the top of the pyramid the bride is seen, her dishevelled hair in the gripe of her ravisher. Theseus attacks the Centaur to rescue her, and Pirithous, on a magnificent horse, with a drawn sword, is flying to her assistance; Hercules is also seen active in the conflict. One of the Centaurs, dressed in lions' skins, is thus described by Ovid:—

"E'en still, methinks, I see Phœocomes;
Strange was his habit, and as odd his dress;
Six lions' hides, with thongs together fast,
His upper part defended to the waist,
And when man ended the continued vest,
Spread on his back the trappings of a beast."

The Academy formerly possessed a cast of the colossal statue of Milo by this artist, probably his finest work, but it was destroyed in the fire of 1845.

231	Dying Gladiator (erroneously so called), . . .	Antique

This statue is justly esteemed one of the very finest in the world, most remarkable for truth and simplicity. The original marble is at Rome, in the Capitol, where it was placed by Pope Clement XII., previous to which it had been at the Villa Ludovisi. It is now considered to represent a Gaul mortally wounded on the battle-field, which is strewn with instruments of warfare. The false name will no doubt always attach to it, and Byron's immortal stanza describing it under that appellation will also remain an enduring association.

"I see before me the Gladiator lie:
He leans upon his hand—his manly brow
Consents to death, but conquers agony,
And his droop'd head sinks gradually low—
And through his side the last drops ebbing flow
From the red gash, fall heavy, one by one,
Like the first of a thunder-shower; and now
The arena swims around him—he is gone,
Ere ceased the inhuman shout which hail'd
The wretch who won."—Byron.

NO.	SUBJECT.	ARTIST.
232	Venus of Arles, ...	Antique.
	The original is in the Louvre. It is said to be a copy from that of Praxiteles, which was in bronze. It was found in the Roman theatre at Arles, in France.
233	Antinous of the Vatican, ...	do.

This statue is now known to represent Mercury, and not Antinous. The original is of Pentelic marble of the finest quality, and was found at Rome on Mount Esquiline, near the hot baths of Titus, during the pontificate of Paul III., who deemed it worthy of being placed in the Vatican Belvidere, near the Apollo and Laocoon. Nicolo Poussin drew from this figure, in preference to all others, his proportions of the human form.

234 | Germanicus, ... | Antique.

This admirable statue is no longer believed to represent Germanicus, for whom it is too old, but Mercury; except that, in the shape, and with the attributes of the God of Eloquence, the ingenious artist has offered us the features of a Roman orator. The original is in the Louvre. It is attributed to Cleomenes, a Grecian sculptor, son of the Athenian of that name, and was found at the villa Negroni, near Rome. It is of Parian marble.

235 | Antinous of the Capitol, ... | Antique.

Antinous was a beautiful youth for whom the Roman Emperor Hadrian entertained a strong affection, and many sculptors were employed to make statues of him, sometimes as Apollo, but more frequently simple portrait statues, like the one before us. The grace and modelling of this figure are such that it can only be praised in superlatives; it is not only beautiful, but beauty itself, "Elysian beauty, melancholy grace." After having belonged to the collection of Cardinal Alexander Albani, it was removed to the Museum of the Capitol, where it now remains.

236 | Dancing Faun, ... | Antique.

The original is in the Tribune at Florence, and is regarded as one of the most admirable statues of antiquity. With his right foot he plays on a musical wind instrument resembling an accordeon. When found, this statue was in fragments, and its restoration by Michael Angelo has always been regarded as a work of extraordinary skill.

237	Head and Trunk of the Venus Milo, ...	Antique.
238	A Boy Wrestling with a Goose, ...	Bœthus, of Carthage.
	The original of this, in Pentelic marble, was found at Roma Vecchia, about a league and a half from Rome, and is a duplicate of a bronze mentioned by Pliny. The head of the boy is a restoration
239	Psyche, of Naples—a fragment, ...	Antique.
	The original in the Museo Borbonico at Naples. It is the upper part of a lovely female figure. It was found in the Amphitheatre of Capua.

240	Boy extracting a Thorn from his Foot, . . .	Antique.
	The original is in the Capitol at Rome, and an antique duplicate in bronze is in the Louvre, and antique marble in the Uffizi, Florence.
241	Aristides, ...	do.
242	Diana of Gabii, ...	do.
	The original is in the Louvre. The goddess is in the act of adjusting her mantle. She walks along "in maiden meditation, fancy free." It was found in the forum of Hadrian at Gabii, near Rome.
243	Atlas, ...	do.
244	Cupid, called Genius of the Vatican, . . .	do.
245	Torso of a Dancing Faun, ...	do.
246	Boy extracting a Thorn (duplicate), ...	do.
247	Venus de' Medici; or, Venus Aphrodite, . . .	Cleomenes, of Athens.

She was the Goddess of Beauty, Mother of Love, Mistress of the Graces and of Pleasures. The original is in the Tribune of the Uffizi at Florence. It is one of the most perfect statues of antique sculpture. The site of its discovery is uncertain. In the 16th century it adorned the Villa Medici, at Rome, and was transferred to Florence in 1680.

248	Torso of Hercules (called Michael Angelo's torso, who studied this more than any other model, and declared that he derived from it his principles of composition), sometimes called the Trunk of the Belvidere, ...	Apollonius.

This inimitable fragment was found at Rome in the fifteenth century, near Pompey's theatre, and was placed by Julius II. in the garden of the Vatican, where it was diligently studied by the great artists of his period, who raised their profession to so elevated a position in the estimation of men. No veins are represented on the hero's body, although he has passed his youth—hence Winckelmann inferred that it represented the Apotheosis of Hercules. It is of Pentelic marble, and an inscription on the rock says that Apollonius, son of Nestór the Athenian, executed it. Nothing was known of a higher style of art until the works of Phidias (the Elgin marbles) were brought to light early in the present century.

249	Discobolus, preparing to throw the Quoit, . . .	Antique.
	The young athleta seems measuring with his eye the distance to which he will cast the discus. This fine figure was found at a place called Colombaro, about three leagues from Rome, on the Appian Way, where it is thought the Emperor Gallienus had a palace. It is of Pentelic marble, and adorns the Vatican, where it was placed by Pius VI.

NO.	SUBJECT.	ARTIST.
250	Venus Victrix, called Venus of Milo, ...	Antique.
	The original is in the Louvre. It is unsurpassed, among the works of antiquity, for grandeur of form united with feminine beauty. It was found in the island of Milo, the ancient Melos, about the year 1822.
251	Cephissus (formerly called Ilissus), from the Elgin marbles, ...	Phidias.

This statue and that of Theseus (No. 253) are among the very finest works that have come down to these times from the great sculptors of antiquity. They decorated the Temple of Minerva at Athens, and are undoubtedly the work of Phidias. The horse's head (No. 261) is a wonderful production of the same master hand. They were placed in the pediment of the Parthenon four hundred and forty years before the birth of Christ, and remained in that situation until removed to London by Lord Elgin in 1808. The British Government purchased from him the whole collection of fragments from that building for the sum of $175,000, an amount altogether inadequate, considering the expense attending their removal and the actual intrinsic value of these works as models for the study of artists.

252	Laocoon and his Sons, ...	Agesander, &c.

This group is the joint production of three famous sculptors of ancient Greece, Agasander, Polydorus, and Sthenodorus. It is now in the Belvidere of the Vatican, along with the most famous of the statues of Apollo. Laocoon, Priest of Apollo, was commissioned by the Trojans to offer sacrifice to Neptune to render him propitious to their cause. During the sacrifice two serpents issued from the sea and attacked Laocoon's two sons who stood near the altar. The father immediately attempted to defend them, but the serpents falling upon him also, crushed him in their complicated folds till he expired in the greatest agony. This group is the most powerful in expression amongst all the antique works of art. It was found in the palace of Titus at Rome, in 1506.

253	Theseus (from the Elgin marbles), . . .	Phidias.
254	Apollo Belvidere, ...	Antique.

Son of Jupiter and Latona, and father of Æsculapius. When Apollo was grown up he went to Pytho or Delphi, where he killed the enormous serpent Python, which infested the surrounding country. The original is in the Belvidere of the Vatican. It is the work of a Grecian sculptor, and among the most celebrated statues of antiquity. It was found in the palace of Nero, at Antium, not far from Rome.

255	Fighting Gladiator, ...	Agasias.
	The author of this well-known marble statue was Agasias, a sculptor of Ephesus, the son of Dositheus. He probably flourished about 450 B. C. The original statue now in the Louvre was found among the ruins of a palace of the Roman Emperors, at Capo d'Anzo, the Ancient Antium. It represents one of those Gladiators who fought upon the Arena for the amusement of the Romans.

256	Son of Niobe, ...	Antique.
	The original is in the Uffizi Gallery at Florence. It is one of the figures of the group of Niobe and her children. He kneels and looks up, seeking to avert the anger of Apollo. The group was found beyond the gate of S. Giovanni at Rome.
257	Suppliant Youth, ...	do.
258	Head and Trunk of Cupid, called the Genius of the Vatican (duplicate), ...	do.
259	Morning and Evening, ...	Michael Angelo.
	Two figures at the base of the monument to Lorenzo de' Medici in the sacristy of the Church of S. Lorenzo at Florence. Michael Angelo was born at Florence in 1474, and died in 1563.
260	Day and Night, ...	do.
	Two figures forming part of the monument to Giuliano de' Medici in the sacristy of the Church of S. Lorenzo at Florence.
261	Head of the Horse of Night, ...	Phidias.

The original marble of this wonderfully fine head is in the British Museum, among the collection of sculptures, by Phidias, brought, by the Earl of Elgin, from the Temple of Minerva, at Athens, and hence called the Elgin marbles. It occupied an angle in the pediment, and projected over the cornice, thus breaking the line which might otherwise seem too rigidly to confine the composition of the frontispiece. The chariot of night sinks into the ocean as the sun rises in the east. This head is esteemed superior beyond comparison to anything else of the kind extant. It was sculptured four hundred and forty years before Christ.

262	Venus Genetrix, ...	Antique.
263	Colossal Feet of the Farnese Hercules, ...	do.
264	Life-sized Anatomical Figure (modern), . . .	Houdon.
265	Cupid Sleeping in a Shell, supported by Dolphins, .	Modern.
266	Venus of the Bath, ...	Antique.
267	Small Crouching Venus, ...	Modern.
268	Milo of Crotona, ...	Puget.

This cast presents only a portion of Puget's statue, as seen in the sculpture gallery of the Louvre. This celebrated athlete was early accustomed to carry the greatest burdens, and became by degrees a monster of strength. Wonderful stories are related of his performances while in the flower of his vigor. But in the decline of life he undertook to tear up a large tree by the roots, and rend it into fragments. While thus engaged, his strength being partly exhausted, his hand became inextricably fastened in a cleft of the wood which had sprung back forcibly, and there being no assistance near, he was devoured by wild beasts of the forest.

	Twin sons of Leda, wife of Trendarus, King of Sparta. The brothers cleared the Hellespont and the neighboring seas from pirates, from which circumstance they have always been deemed the friends of navigation.
270	Silenus holding the Infant Bacchus, ...	do.

Silenus, a demigod, who became the nurse, the preceptors and attendant of the god Bacchus. He was, as some supposed, the son of Pan. Bacchus was son of Jupiter and Semele, daughter of Cadmus. The original is in the Louvre. It was found at Rome on the site of the Portico of Octavia. Antique duplicates of this, as of many of the ancient statues, are met with in other collections of old marbles.

271	The Townley Venus, ...	Antique.
	The original of this beautiful figure adorns the British Museum. It derives its distinguishing name from its former owner, whose entire collection of antique marbles was purchased by the British Government as a nucleus of a national museum of ancient sculpture.
272	Jason (usually called Cincinnatus), ...	do.

The original is in the Louvre at Paris, is of Pentelic marble, and was for some time in the apartments at Versailles, previous to which it was at the Villa Montalto or Negroni. The left arm, the hand, and part of the right leg are modern. The ploughshare, feet, sandal, and all that belong to the plinth are antique.

In order to calm the suspicious inquietude of his uncle Peleus, King of Thessaly, this warrior led a rural life, and was cultivating his fields, when a messenger from the king came to invite him to sacrifices in honor of Neptune. Jason has just left his occupation, which is indicated by the ploughshare at his feet; he is in the attitude of tying his sandal on his right foot, but we see that he is listening to the messenger. One can readily surmise that the other foot is to remain bare, and that the hero will show in his person, to Peleus, the man with one sandal announced by the oracle as his murderer. Thus the figure, although alone, has all the charm of a group, and recalls to the mind an entire history.

273	The Knife Grinder, or Listening Slave, ...	Antique.
	One of the five famous marbles in the Tribune of the Uffizi, Florence.
274	Colossal Head of Jupiter, ...	do.

This is the grandest and most sublime of all ancient monuments representing the image of the master of gods and men. Serenity, mildness, and majesty are imprinted on the features of this incomparable head, and perfectly express the idea of the epithet mansuetus, which the ancients attribute to Jupiter. This bust, of the marble of Luni, is in the Vatican Museum, where Pius VI. placed it. It was found in the ruins of La Colonia Otriculana, now called Otricoli, seventeen leagues from Rome, on the Flaminian Road. Probably it is part of a colossal statue.

302	Frieze of the Parthenon, ...	Phidias.
	The originals of these beautiful bas-reliefs are among the Elgin marbles in the British Museum. They are a series of sculptures, designed by Phidias, executed by him and his pupils, and attached along the upper part of the outside of the cella of the Parthenon under the colonnade. They represent the whole of the solemn procession to the great temple of Minerva during the Panathenaic Festival.
303	The Frieze of the Temple of Phigalia, ...	Ictinus.
	The originals of these bas-reliefs are among the Phigalian marbles in the British Museum. They are a series of sculptures designed by Ictinus, the contemporary of Phidias, and carried along the interior of the cella of the temple of Apollo near Phigalia. They were found in the ruins of that temple.
304	Singing School (alto relievo), ...	Luca della Robbia.
	The original marble of this admirable group is in the Uffizi Gallery at Florence, and that city abounds with works by him and his school.
305	Venus Anodyomene, called de' Medici (cast without arms, a duplicate), ...	Cleomenes.

In the original marble statue at Florence, as seen in the cast in the adjoining gallery, the whole right arm and part of the left forearm are modern, having been added by a Florentine artist in the latter end of the seventeenth century. The air of affectation apparent in the action of the restored work is absent from this one. The artist to whom the statue is attributed lived about two hundred years before Christ—was the son of Apollodorus, and father of that other Cleomenes who sculptured the Mercury, miscalled Germanicus. He was famous for his skill in representing female beauty, and Pliny relates that a Roman knight became enamored of a statue by him of a Thespiade transported from Greece to Rome by L. Mummius. This work is of Parian marble of an unusually fine grain. At a time when money was of much greater value than now, Cosmo III., Grand Duke of Tuscany, was offered one hundred thousand livres for this statue; but of course it was declined. It is believed to have been found at Hadrian's Villa, near Tivoli; but about this there appears some uncertainty.

700	The War Summons, . For sale	G. Leslie.

The "War Summons" represents the arrival at Paston Manor-house of a herald-at-arms with a letter from Jockey, of Norfolk, during the Wars of the Roses. The summons has broken up a pleasant family party on the terrace outside the Manor-house; the father of the family reads the unwelcome command to be at Bury, with such a company of tall men as he may, in rueful perturbation; the mother sees the prospect of danger; lovers are wrenched by the pain of separation. In the foreground a pretty girl, who has been twining her garland of red and white roses, looks up from her task, scared and anxious. The herald, a fine burly figure, in full armor, with the colors of Norfolk in his surcoat, and on the pennoncel of his trumpet, waits for an answer.

717	Deliverance of Leyden, . . .	J. B. Wittkamp.	P. A. F. A.

In 1574, during the cruel wars carried on by Philip II., Leyden was besieged by the Spaniards under Valdez, proper precautions were by some fatality neglected, and the inhabitants were exposed to the pressure of a thousand wants during the most obstinate and bloody siege the Netherlands had yet experienced. The Spaniards, by a strict blockade, reduced it to the last extremity. Six thousand persons out of twenty thousand died of famine.

The magnanimous resolution was formed of breaking down the dikes, and letting the ocean overflow the Rhineland. Information was given to the besieged by their countrymen at a distance, by means of carrier-pigeons, that the dikes of the Meuse and the Yssel had been opened. The sea, impelled by a violent southwest wind, rushed in and drove the inundation with snch fury against the besiegers, that Valdez, fearing that his army would be swallowed up in the waves, was obliged to draw off his forces, and relinquish the enterprise. The Admiral of Zeeland, Louis Boissot, then advanced with his little fleet of flat-bottomed boats, which had been prepared for the relief of the brave citizens, sailed over the newly-formed expanse, and entered the city.

The Prince of Orange soon arrived among the gallant inhabitants. After rewarding the Admiral and the commander of the town, Douza (or Does), and the officers and soldiers, he offered to the town the option of two benefits—an immunity from taxes for a certain period, or the foundation of a nniversity in the city. The citizens crowned their former glory by choosing the latter part of the alternative. It is to this circumstance that the celebrated University of Leyden owes its existence.

No. 1. Is the Burgomaster of the town, Pieter Adrianszoon Vanderwerf. He is raising his eyes towards heaven, as thanking the God of his country.

No. 2. Pieter Corneleszoon Manalant, an Evangelical Preacher, apostle of the Protestant religion.

No. 3. The Military Chief, Van der Does.

No. 4. Gerard Van der Laan, Captain of Volunteers, who has returned from the outside of the town, where he has protected Boissot's boats.

No. 5. The Poet, Pieter Janszoon Van der Morsch, wounded during the siege.

No. 6. Is a portrait of the Painter, M. Wittkamp.

The groups dispersed over the picture represent different classes of society. The deliverance of the town and the arrival of bread are the two sentiments that cause a thrill among the wretched inhabitants, who had been on the brink of the grave.

"—— Ae market night,
Tam had got planted uneo right,
Fast by an ingle bleezing finely,
Wi' reaming swats, that drank divinely;
And at his elbow Souter Johnny,
His ancient, trusty, drouthy crony.
Tam lo'ed him like a vera brither,
They had been fou' for weeks thegither.
The night drave on wi' sangs an' clatter,
And a' the ale was growing better:
The landlady and Tam grew gracious,
Wi' favors secret, sweet, and precious;
The souter tauld his queerest stories;
The landlord's laugh was ready chorus;
The storm without might rair and rustle,
Tam did na mind the storm a whistle."

ANNUAL EXHIBITIONS.

The Annual Spring Exhibitions of fresh pictures and other works of art, open to the public on the fourth Monday in April, and generally continue open six weeks, during which period nothing can be removed.

The time for receiving works intended for exhibition is from the first Monday in April until the Saturday following. Contributors should send in a notice to the Academy before the first Monday in April, of their works intended for exhibition.

It is absolutely necessary that owners of pictures should be willing to receive them home as soon as the exhibition is over. The Academy is unable to provide space, or assume the responsibility of the care of pictures, or other works of art, except during the period of their actual display upon the walls. Works left in the galleries after the close of the Spring Exhibition cannot be removed before the end of the March following, nor can any works be deposited in the Academy during the nine months' recess term, without special permission of the Committee on Exhibition being first obtained.

Art School of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts.

ANNUAL DISTRIBUTION OF STUDIES FOR EACH EVENING THROUGH THE SIX MONTHS, BEGINNING OCTOBER 1, AND ENDING WITH THE CLOSE OF MARCH.

The Class for the Study of the Antique will find the gallery lighted for drawing or modelling on the evenings of Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday of each week, from 7 to 9½ o'clock, beginning with October and closing with March, a term of six months, except on the evenings of Lectures.

The ticket of the class admits to the Anatomical Lectures.

Life Class.

The term of study in the Life Class also commences October first, and continues till the end of March, a period of six months. The evenings are Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, from 7 to 9½ o'clock, except during the delivery of the Lectures on Anatomy, which, while they continue, will take the place of the usual Life Class meetings on Fridays. The Lectures on Anatomy are free to this class also.

Lectures on Anatomy.

As a valuable and almost necessary aid to study, in acquiring a thorough knowledge of the human form, there has been added to the other facilities provided, a course of Lectures on Artistic Anatomy. They are delivered in the Life Class room of the Academy on the evenings of Friday in each week, at 8 o'clock, commencing the third Friday in November. During two weeks in December, while the dissections continue, as many as ten lectures will be delivered—one each succeeding evening, except Christmas day. These lectures are open to all the members of the other classes, and to the artists generally, without charge.

The Library of the Academy is open for the study of Artists, the Art Students, and the Stockholders, on application to the Curator (subject to proper regulations), except during the Spring Exhibition, or any special exhibition.

Pictures, the Property of the Academy, are free to the Art Student to make study copies from (differing in size from the originals). For this the permit of the President of the Academy is requisite, who issues it on the recommendation of the Committee on Instruction, to whom application must be made.
